As an organization with a membership representing many fields, from medicine, technology, law, finance, education, entertainment, the military, and many others, we seek to create an organization where Asian Americans of all descent, Chinese, Korean, Japanese, Vietnamese, Filipino, Indian and others can work together to advance our collective career advancement and make significant contributions to our community through volunteer and charity work.

Having celebrated our 20th Anniversary in 2002, NAAAP has come a long way in its 20 year history and we hope to make great strides in the years to come.

workplace

As Asian Americans become a significant part of the corporate workplace and as companies diversify their workforce, it is important that companies see the value in addressing the needs of their Asian American employees and involving them in their diversity programs.

Companies can work with NAAAP which not only benefit their own Asian American employees but also raise Asian American awareness in the workplace. Ultimately, companies that understand their own employees are more productive companies. NAAAP invites companies to learn about our sponsorship programs and its benefits.

We live and breathe the community that we live in. This in turn makes it even more important to serve the people through volunteer and community service.

Volunteering your time and energy as a professional to NAAAP is a great way to help raise Asian American awareness. NAAAP also works actively with other Asian and non-Asian organizations in an effort to broaden the service efforts of Asian Americans. By building communities through volunteerism, we solidify our presence in building a greater community for everyone.
